Feeling worried about coronavirus (COVID-19)?

Anxiety, excessive worrying, feeling helpless, concentration challenges and difficulty sleeping are all unwelcome side effects during times of uncertainty. Developing good coping techniques can help you feel calm and in control. Here are some tips:

Effective coping techniques:
- Practice constructive thinking: “One’s thoughts produce one’s emotions”
- Get the facts without overreacting
- Keep things in perspective
- Find ways to stay connected virtually
- Stay physically healthy
- Maintain connections with the people in your life
- Self-monitor: take your “psychological pulse”
- Know about available resources if needed

If you are struggling with worry, reach out to your healthcare practitioner for guidance and support.

Stay informed!

Follow the guidelines and information provided by the Centers for Disease Control. Visit:

Live in the moment with mindfulness

Mindfulness is the practice of living in, and being aware of, the present moment, free from judgment and overthinking. It can be an effective way to control worry and anxiety, no matter what the situation. These tips can help you get started.

Notice the world around you. Try to appreciate the small details of your life. For example, look out the window and take notice of the sky—the color and shape of the clouds and treetops swaying.

Be actively engaged. Whether you are working on a project, having a conversation, reading a book or watching a movie, give whatever it is you are doing your full attention.

Learn to let go of the things you can’t control and focus on the one thing you can: The decisions you make in the present.

Minimize worry. When you find yourself worrying, remind yourself to stop and refocus on the present moment.

Act deliberately. As you go through your day, think about the tasks you’re performing and what is going on while you’re doing them.

Slow down and do less. Prioritize items on your to-do list and make sure that you’re focusing on what is necessary while allowing yourself to do things for pleasure.
Coronavirus (COVID-19): A reminder to protect yourself and others

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick
- Wash your hands with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth
- Disinfect frequently touched objects and surfaces
- Cover your cough or sneeze with a tissue, then discard the tissue
- Follow current recommendations for social distancing

Drugs or alcohol: Signs you may have a problem

Using alcohol or drugs to unwind, calm your jitters or feel sociable can start out as fun but can easily turn into a problem even before you may be aware of it. If you answer “Yes” to any of the following, it may be time to get help to protect your health.

- I avoid parties and places where there isn’t alcohol/drugs.
- I’m skipping work and/or missing deadlines.
- I’ve started to hide my alcohol or drug use from others.
- I’m having accidents, such as tripping and falling.
- I’m engaging in risky behavior such as driving while drinking or getting high.
- I have more arguments with friends and family when drinking or getting high.
- I’ve blacked out and don’t remember what happened.

A licensed counselor can help you understand your patterns of alcohol or substance use, learn better ways to cope with stress, and make healthy choices.

FREE Webinar: Drugs and Addictions
Log on:
HealthAdvocate.com/members

To view: Log onto your member website to access the EAP+Work/Life homepage. Click on Webinar.

Alcohol Awareness Month

Reminder: If you’re thinking about cutting back on alcohol, understanding why and when you turn to alcohol can be the first step. A Health Advocate Licensed Professional Counselor can help you identify your triggers and develop healthier coping skills for life’s challenges. It’s totally confidential.

Turn to us—we can help.

877.240.6863
Email: answers@HealthAdvocate.com
Web: HealthAdvocate.com/members
Enter “Delaware Valley Trusts”

24/7 Support
Don’t forget to visit your Health Advocate member website for information, tools, tips and more!

Visit our award-winning healthcare blog at blog.HealthAdvocate.com

Health Advocate is not a direct medical care provider, and is not affiliated with any insurance company or third party provider.